Copyright and Educational Materials

For appropriate educational reasons, the Office may copy and distribute published and otherwise printed educational materials. In so doing, the Office shall respect copyright laws and obtain permission for the copying and distribution as required.

Materials first published or developed by the Office shall be afforded the same copyright protections as materials published elsewhere. Whenever permission to copy or disseminate such materials is sought for valid educational reasons, such permissions shall be granted, provided that proper credit is given for the source of the material.

In selecting materials to be copied or distributed, or to be included on reference lists for distribution, the Superintendent or designee shall include materials that are accurate, current, and representative of various opinions. Decisions concerning the selection of materials to be copied, distributed, or included on reference lists are the responsibility of the Superintendent or designee.

Whenever a person wishes to file a formal objection to the educational materials used in schools or classes operated by the Office, the Office’s Uniform Complaint Procedures shall be followed.
